Location & surrounding area:

Naples is in southwest Florida on the coast of the Gulf of Mexico.

Starting as a fishing village, Naples developed in the 20th Century continuously upwards. One reason was the construction of its own railway station which improved the infrastructure. Another reason was Hurricane Donna.

In the fifties, Naples has been almost completely destroyed by Hurricane Donna. After this disaster payments of insurance and rebuilding began and made Naples into what it is today: one of the most exclusive places.

Naples is one of the richest cities in the United States. The per capita income is above the national average.
